Press Release

Rabbis Agree: Passover Book Celebrates Old Traditions, Hints at New Ones

MARCH 1, 2018: Released today, No Seder Without You by Joan Goldstein Parker is “a sensitive and touching account of the Passover celebration,” according to Rabbi Ron Isaacs. In this charming story of Seders past, the author deftly turns her childhood memories into a reminder to our children and grandchildren that, without them, there is no Seder.

“Readers of all ages will...delight in this heartfelt account...I highly recommend it.” — Rabbi Ron Isaacs

“This beautifully illustrated book touched my soul...I can’t wait to share it with my grandchildren [and to] gather them around me, as the author does, in a football huddle, to tell them there’s ‘No Seder Without You.’” — Rabbi Charles A. Kroloff

“...a trip down memory lane, but with a refreshing and important twist...carries the spirit of Passover from one generation to the next.” — Rabbi Michael P. Singer

“...a beautiful tribute to the role children play in the Passover ritual.” — Rabbi Allen Juda

“...a sweet book...” — Rabbi Manes Kogan

No Seder Without You features a helpful section that defines Passover-related words and journal pages for readers to record their own Seder memories.

A portion of the money received for every copy sold of No Seder Without You is going to the Yiddish Book Center in Amherst, Massachusetts (www.yiddishbookcenter.org).

For 8- to 13-year-olds and the families who love them.

Joan Goldstein Parker grew up in New York City, where the question, “Where are you going for Seder?” was always answered the same way: at her home, where three or four generations of extended family read the Haggadah and shared the celebration together each year.
